- CCAC is comprised of four campuses and five educational centers. Lead by the Executive Director of Emergency Management Safety/Security.
- Each campus and center has a Director of Safety and Security who is also a sworn police officer as recognized by the Office of the Governor of the State of Pennsylvania and governed by the Office of the State Secretary of Education. The police powers of the Security Directors come from Pa. C.S.A. Title 22, Section 501, subsection c Powers.
- These Directors are charged with all the duties and responsibilities pertaining to Campus Safety and Security and report to the Executive Director of Safety & Security. Those duties include but are not limited to, developing safety and security education for the college's staff, students and faculty, conducting inspections of life saving equipment, and initiating new technology into the security system.
- Security at CCAC is further supplemented by a contracted security firm which provides uniformed, un-sworn security supervisors and security guards at each campus and center. Contracted supervisors and guards are not police officers but serve a vital function in the safety and security of the campus community. An arrest, if necessary, will be referred to a sworn police officer.

What technology do you use to manage incidents at the notification and response phases of an incident?

Can you talk about the training, preparation of your campus and your department to manage protests and other civil unrest incidents?

How did you coordinate your preparation and response with local law enforcement?

How is public safety partnering with other campus key stakeholders to measure your campus climate?

How has risk assessment or threat assessment changed over the last five years?

Have you had challenges recruiting officers?

What are some additional key competencies that you look for that might be 'in addition to' a city or municipal officer?

How have you amended or tweaked your officer training to manage your campus climate challenges?
